Announcing: The Grand Opening of Redesigned Virtual LRC!

<http://www.virtuallrc.com/>

Re-discover everything that you love about the Virtual LRC, and we've made it even better! This is a complete reorganization and redesign of the site.

First established in 1998, the Virtual LRC, designed for upper high school and college students, is one of the oldest search engines and web directories for students on the Internet.

What's New?

- Browsible directory based on recommendations by teachers and librarians around the world
- Easy to navigate
- Clean design
- Keyword guide for many subjects

What People Are Saying about the Virtual LRC:

Welcome!

Welcome to the students and teachers of Warminster, Pennsylvania! We're happy you are using Infotopia.info, Infotrek.info and Kidtopia.info for your research needs!

THE PERIODIC TABLE of COMIC BOOKS

Are your students struggling with the Periodic Table? Do they need some inspiration to research the elements? There's a great website, The Periodic Table of Comic Books, created by the Department of Chemistry at the University of Kentucky, that shows a list of comic book pages related to each element. From Batman and Wonder Woman, to DC Comics and Detective Comics, the website developer has scanned pages from comic books that refer to the specific element selected.

Why not have students create their own comics using an element as part of the comic? Our favorite website to create a comic is as follows:

<https://www.makebeliefscomix.com/Comix/>

Once your students are ready to perform actual research on their element, have them check out webelements.com for the detailed information about each element.

<https://www.webelements.com/>

This comic was created at www.MakeBeliefsComix.com. Go there and make one now!

Check out the comic that we made. Do we get extra points for including two elements???

Are you a wordaholic (a lover of words), a logolept (a person who takes a keen interest in words), or a verbivore (one who enjoys words and wordplay)? If so, you'll love Richard Lederer's Verbivore Website. It links to many great language sites, covering topics such as:

- English on YouTube
- Etymology
- Grammar and Usage
- Language Blogs and Online Magazines
- Puns
- Anagrams
- Dictionaries and Thesauri
- Slang and Dialects
- Word Games

Kidtopia

Are your elementary students looking for math games or math activities to sharpen their skills? Try our Kidtopia Math Resources for recommended websites.

<http://www.kidtopia.info/math.html>

One of our favorite resources is Great Websites for Kids from the American Library Association, which recommends the best websites for kids on mathematics and computers and technology.
