When you get ready to research a topic on the web, do you automatically use Google? Why not use trusted "custom" search engines such as Infotopia, Kidtopia, or Infotrek, that only access websites recommended by teachers and librarians? Unsure how to use them? The searches work exactly like Google searches and each site also has links to recommended sources or recommended search terms.

Check out our YouTube videos with a brief introduction to each search engine.

The Holocaust

If you students are studying the Holocaust, have them review our recommended links at the following:
http://www.infotopia.info/holocaust.html

Be sure to preview the websites, depending on the age level of your students. Many contain graphic photographs of the tragedies that occurred.

For a starting place for their research, try the Holocaust Museum's website:
