

Science and Math Web Sites for Students

Are you looking for great web sites for students? Rader has a network of science and math sites, including some fantastic sites in the areas of geography, astronomy, biology, chemistry, physics, and math. There are a few advertisements, but the content is a good starting place for students to learn about these subjects.

<http://www.biology4kids.com/>

<http://www.chem4kids.com/>

<http://www.physics4kids.com/>

<http://www.numbernut.com/>

Each topic has detailed information. For example, geography4kids is an introduction to earth science, and includes information on the earth's structure, atmosphere, hydrosphere, biosphere, climate, and more! There is also a quiz on each section for students to check their understanding. Another component that Rader includes is useful reference links.

COOL TEXT!

Are you in need of some really cool text for a presentation, a web page/blog or a document? Try out the following:

<https://maketext.io>

You just type in your text and it gives you a selection of at least 36 different "cool texts" to choose from. Once you select a text, you can change the font, the palette of colors, the shadow, the background, and more. (You can easily choose a transparent background.) Then just download the image as a PNG and you are ready to transfer it to a document, web page, presentation, etc. Here are a few that we created. (And best of all, it's free!)
