Primary Sources

https://www.infotopia.info/primary_sources.html

Have your students investigated our primary sources web page yet? Find primary documents, videos, images, and recordings from history for the United States, New Zealand, and Australia, as well as individual U.S. states.

Primary sources are the raw materials of history—original documents or objects that were created at the time of an event. Secondary sources retell or analyze historical events. It can be very interesting to analyze primary sources and compare them to several secondary sources!

Some of our recommendations include the following:

Explore the New York Public Library Digital Collection of nearly 750,000 digitized items, including prints, photographs, maps, manuscripts, streaming video, and more.

Listen to current and historical speeches at American Rhetoric, including the top 100 speeches of all time.

Why and how should students use primary sources? The Library of Congress has many recommendations to engage students in using primary sources and to promote student inquiry.

Digital History includes the following topics: The First Americans, Colonial Era, American Revolution, Early National Period, Pre-Civil War Era, Slavery, Civil War, Reconstructions, and many more, all the way to the 21st Century. For each topic, you can find an overview, a free online textbook, primary documents, events, people, music, films that are about that topic, images, multimedia and more.
