Are your students studying countries of the world? Check out our resources on geography and travel, including websites that compare and contrast demographics of various countries, provide medical tips for travelers, include panoramic virtual tours, and have the lyrics and music for national anthems around the world.

An interesting new site is MapFight (<https://mapfight.appspot.com/>) which visually compares the sizes of any two geographical areas. For example, which is larger: Shanghai or London? India or Greenland? Africa or Russia?

To check out panoramas of locations around the globe, try the website: <http://www.panoramas.dk/>
You can also just look at USA 360 Virtual Tours at: <http://www.panoramas.dk/US/index.html>

To compare and contrast demographic data for countries, we recommend the following:
<https://www.cia.gov/library/publications/the-world-factbook/>
or
<https://www.nationmaster.com/country-info/profiles>

For fascinating travel photos, be sure to look at National Geographic's Travel website, and you will definitely want to scroll down to the Travel Photo Contest Winners.

Below are miniatures of some images that I downloaded from a few of these sites:

<https://newspapermap.com/>

An interesting web site where students can learn geography as well as languages and literacy, is NewspaperMap.com. Students just click on a country or city on a world map and a newspaper link comes up. Some of the newspapers are in English and for others, both English and the native language of the city/country are available.

<http://www.onlinenewspapers.com/>

Another interesting online newspaper site includes thousands of newspapers from around the world and can be found at OnlineNewspapers.com. Students can search by country, or can search for the top 50 in various countries, including the USA.

<https://www.newseum.org/todaysfrontpages/>

Do you want to see only the front page of a newspaper from around the world? Students can search through a list or a map to find front pages from around the world.

Just think about the ways that these newspapers can be used by students in civics, history, geography, English, and foreign language classes!

Google custom search

Don't forget that you and your students can do a Google custom search on Kidtopia or any of our custom search engines by simply typing your subject or keyword into the search box. Did you know that our search engines ONLY locate websites that we have selected, based on age-appropriateness and recommendations by teachers and librarians. Note that sometimes websites lose their funding and are bought out by other entities. We strive to check all our websites periodically. If you find a problematic website, let us know (bell@infotopia.info) and we'll check it out immediately. Meanwhile our search engines are recommended as follows:

Kidtopia.info—grades PK-4 or 5
Infotrek.info—grades 9+

Infotopia.info—grades 5 and up
VirtualLRC.com—grades 9+
